The exercises of Thursday were somewhat out of the usual run of institute exercises, partaking of the nature of an old fashioned Thanksgiving celebration.

The day was opened by the singing of "Nearer, my God, to thee," followed by an appropriate petition to the Throme of Divine Grace by Prof. Purinton, superintendent of the schools of Parkersburg.

Prof. Wade, of Morgantown, delivered an address of no great length, but full of suggestions of value, taking for his subject "The Qualifications of Touchers and Superintendents."

intendent Peaslee is an enthusiastic advocate of literary training of the young, and is the originator of the plan, now in general vogue, of eelebrating in the schools the birthdays of prominent American authops.

He would not do away with the present plan of teaching English literature, but supptement it and add to it. He would, however, begin with the writings of living American authors and go back to Chaucer, instead of the reverse, as in now customary, and he would begin the work with small pupils instead of crowding it into the high schools. He thought one of the serious mistakes of our school system was the consumption of so much time in teaching arithmetic. It could not be laught too thoroughly, but he would stop occupying time with puzzles in arithmetic, and devota it to composition, reading and general improvement in literary matters. He would like to see pupils inspired with higher aspirations than to gain high monthly preserved. He conclusived the cramming Squire Waltz. We deare to the control of the contro

The incidental education of other faculties is

The session last evening was one of especial interest, and the portion of the audience who went without especial interest in the exercises was weeded out by the fact that a fee The children of the choir were also reduced in number, but the older and more proficient ones were present, and the result was a finer quality of nusic, though of reduced volume. They sang "Hear the Merry School Belt Ring."

"Hear the Merry School Bell Blag."

After which Superintendent Butcher introduced Hon. J. J. Burns, ex-State Superintendent of Ohlo, whose lecture on "The Boy that is and the Man that Ought to be," was the main feature of the evening sentertainment. He commenced his talk with a figurative consideration of boys as clay in the hands of the potter, or marble in the scalptor's hands. There are three things of prime importance to the potter, or marble in the scalptor's hands. There are three things of prime importance to the potter, in scalp, the materials of which his wares are to be produced, the process of formation and the shape and quality of the completed ware. Soit is with children. The isache' is called upon to consider three principal things: the nature of the raw material, the process of making him into something useful, and finally, what shall he be when the teacher is done with him.

Mr. Jurns first cansidered the word "Boy" in a grammatical way. Boy is a noun, and singular—and he had found it very singular if a boy could not find other boys. His remarks on this subject were all in the same witty vein, and kept the audience smilling continually while not laughing.

Thus, the word boy is said to be monesyllable, the koy lithself is polaslyabic—very. The word boy is a primary word; the boy is a derivative. The word boy is found in the original; Emerson saysa boy is "a quotatian from all his ancestors." The boy's big sister about so 'clock in the evening fluds him in the objective case, and thinks he should be sent to bed. Going on with the ways it could be governed, remarking that the boy himself was generally sustained by his relations, and seldom governed at all.

The boys were also classified according to their dispositions, cheerful or morose, industriates the search of the relations of the search of the relations, and seldom governed that all the same to the search of the relations of the search of the relations, and seldom governed at all.

The boys were also classified according to The boys were also classified according to their dispositions, cheerful or morose, industrious or lazy; and again "there are washed boys and unwashed boys." He said the first boy who came into the world killed the second one, and his parents did not have the pleasure of blanning his badness on "those norrid Smith boys across the street,"

Settlement of the Cas Cases-Andy King Deeds Property to the City and The compromise of an important suit was effected yesterday that affects the city, as it was the plaintiff. Reference is made to the Maxwell and King gas case. Maxwell and King gas case.

The first intimation the public had that such a proceeding was contemplated was on last Tuesday evening, when the following committee report was introduced into the First Hranch and passed. From there it went to the Second, which also adopted it:

To the Honorable Mayor and members of Council:

To the Honorable Mayor and members of Council:

OENTIEMEN—The Board of Claims would most respectfully report that the attorneys for the city in the case in the Circuit Court of Ohio county of the city of Wheeling against Maxwell and King, have reported to the Board that overtures and offers for the settlement of the said case have been made by the attorneys for the defendant, King, and inasmuch as the discussion of the proposition made by the defendant, King, in open Council might be productive of serious injury to the interests of the city in the trial of said case, and as this Board is advised that such propositions are worthy of serious consideration, therefore your committee reconsideration, therefore your committee reconsideration, therefore your committee reconsiderations now offered, or any others that may be offered in relation to said suit; and they are further authorized and empowered to settle and adjust anid suit by compromise upon such torms as shall seem to them best for the interests of the city, and said lloard is hereby further empowered to do and perform all things proper and necessary to be done to carry out the compromise agreed upon.

upon. W. B. Sintson, Chairman.
Before a vote could be had, Mr. Burdaits jumped to his feet and called up a resolution he had had on the table for some time, which read as follows:
Wurrass, The criminal prosecution against John L. Maxwelland Andrew King has failed, and whereas the said Maxwell, has left the State to remain permanenty absent and law State to remain permanently absent, and has left no property behind him, and whereas the civil action brought by the city of Wheeling against the said Maxwell and King can not be made available against the said Maxwell, the person principally responsible therein, Resolved, That the said civil action be disvised provided the defoulants or consequences. Resolved, That the said civil action be dis-naissed, provided the defendants, or one of them, will agree to pay the costs thereof, and that the City Solicitor be instructed to have the said action dismissed on those terms. A member on the inside of the compromise quickly whispered to Mr. Burdats that something better was offered, and he with-drew his paper and the committee report was adopted.

Last evening the deeds were signed by which Andrew King turned over to the city real es-tate assessed at $5,000, consisting of a lot in Caldwell's addition, the house in which King Culdwell's addition, the house in which King lives and also the one at present occupied by George G. Hannan, Fas; also fifty-six shares of Ætna mill stock, the par value of which is $100, but at the present premium is worth $120; also accrued dividends on the same, amounting to $1,450. The above makes a total turned over to the city of $13,512; in addition there were sundry small, attachments and rent from Mr. Hannan that will swell the carried with the next $14,000. Of this amount ming. King was represented by Attorneys Hubbard, Russell and Good.

Since the failure of the criminal action against the former gas officials, King's attorneys have been willing for some time past to compromise, and Messrs. Russell and Cracraft have on several occasions talked the matter gyer. The result was the presenting a few days ago to the Board, through Solicitor Caldwell, the statement that a compromise could be effected, and last Wednesday the terms, as stated above, were presented and accepted.

By the terms of the compromise the city dismisses the suit against king and he is released from all civil obligations, and as the courts have cleared him of any criminality, this virtually ends the celebrated gas cases. With the history of the suits, both civil and criminal, the public has been made thoroughly acquainted through the press. From that cold Sunday night when the gas office was fired and the books destroyed, through the long and careful examination of the books not burned, through the courts and up to the present tign all he has been careful.

long and careful examination of the books not burned, through the courts and up to the present time, all has been carefully reported and does not need rehearsing. The examin-ation of the books as far as it was conducted showed false entries and discrepancies to the amount of $15,000 or $14,000. What the de-stroyed books contained it is impossible to say, but the city's total loss was estimated to be at least $20,000.

Mr. Bocking has branched out into the novelty department, and we must not fail to call attention to it. It embraces an almost innumerable variety of articles. Among other articles we found work boxes, jewel and perfame cases, pocket books, infant sets, watch stands, cigar cases, pull boxes and odd and fantastic toilet sets. A large number of these articles are in plush, with heavy and rich trimmings, and would make most elegant and appropriate gifts.

Then in brushes and brush boxes, every variety can be found, including enamelled, celluloid, ivory, rubber, bone and mahogany. The sets are in beautiful satin-lined boxes, with a hand-glass corresponding in design. Another handsome novelty, and something new in the city, is a combination satin and plush brush and comb case for the wall, that is very neat and tasty.

new in the city, is a combination satin and it plush brush and comb case for the wall, it that is very neat and tasty.

All of these goods and many more, the enumeration of which would take up more space than we can spare, are displayed in handsome, polished cases that glitter and shine like mirrors whichever way one turns. Ladies wishing to present their gentlemen friends who are lovers of the weed with eigars will find an elegant line and assortment of the best brands here. Before purchasing your holiday gifts, don't fail to call at Mr. Bocking's and look at the goods. It will repay you the time spent. MIII Site.
